

OncoPrescribe Disclaimer On Use

Remember that OncoPrescribe is a tool for enhancing medical education. While we do everything possible to help you help your patients, it's still you, the Clinical Oncologist and Health Care Provider, who is ultimately responsible for patient care.

The specific regimens & dosages of all drugs provided by this service have been recommended in medical literature and/or through evidence-based medical research. The medications and regimens do not necessarily have specific approval by the Food and Drug Administration for the disease entities and stages indicated. The package insert for each drug should be consulted for use and dosage. OncoPrescribe makes every effort to provide the latest information and revised recommendations, particularly concerning new drugs.

It is the responsibility of the Health Care Provider to take into account the patient's condition as well as any contraindications or dangers in use of a product, based on the manufacturer's Product Information, before prescribing such a product.