

OncoPrescribe Terms Of Use

PLEASE CAREFULLY READ THE FOLLOWING TERMS AND CONDITIONS OF USE BEFORE USING THIS WEB SITE. THE TERMS GOVERN YOUR USE OF THE SITE AND ARE BINDING BETWEEN YOU AND ONCOPRESCRIBE, LLC.

Your use of this website constitutes your full legal acceptance of the Terms. By using the Site, you also agree to our privacy policy. IF YOU DO NOT AGREE TO THE TERMS, YOU ARE NOT AUTHORIZED TO USE THE SITE. You agree that OncoPrescribe, LLC may change these terms from time to time, without advance notice. Please review the Terms periodically for any changes or modifications.

OncoPrescribe is a tool that is meant to make the life of Hematology and Oncology Health Care Providers easier, by providing the educational resources to improve patient care, and thereby giving the Health Care Providers the ability to write accurate prescriptions which are evidence based. In short, we are providing a tool to help you write perfect prescriptions. You understand, however, that OncoPrescribe is a tool for enhancing medical education to improve patient care. By using OncoPrescribe, you are agreeing that the responsibility of writing prescriptions still falls on you, the Hematology and Oncology Health Care Provider.

When using OncoPrescribe, you take responsibility for the accuracy of the order

By using OncoPrescribe, you are acknowledging that it is your responsibility to carefully select regimens, dosages and supportive care each time you write a prescription. You also acknowledge that it is your responsibility to review all the information for accuracy.

You must be a licensed Health Care Provider in the Specialty of Medical Oncology, Hematology and Oncology or Hematology to use OncoPrescribe

By using OncoPrescribe, you are acknowledging that you are a licensed physician in good-standing, with the right to prescribe chemotherapy drugs.

It is up to you to implement safeguards so that an individual without the forementioned credentials does not use your login/password to write chemotherapy orders. However, just as a non-physician could take a paper order pad from your office, in spite of taking all normal precautions, it is possible that an unauthorized person might get hold of your OncoPrescribe login/password information. If you believe your password/login information has been compromised, it is your responsibility to change that information on the PROFILE section of OncoPrescribe.

Use of references to ensure each regimen is evidence based

OncoPrescribe Terms Of Use

Every regimen that is presented by OncoPrescribe -- and offered to the Oncologist as an option to prescribe for a given Diagnosis and Stage -- is Evidence-based, meaning that there is published research to support the use of that regimen for the specific circumstance described. However, you acknowledge that while all OncoPrescribe regimens are Evidence-based, that does not automatically mean that regimen is approved for use by your individual practice. You understand that you must consider your own practice guidelines before selecting any regimens.

You also acknowledge that just because a regimen is Evidence-based, that does not ensure that the patient's insurance company will reimburse you for this regimen. You are responsible for determining if any regimen prescribed is covered by the applicable insurance carrier.

Accuracy of Information within OncoPrescribe

All data in OncoPrescribe has been subject to an intense Quality Assurance process, including review by Board Certified Oncologists to help ensure it is 100% correct. Nonetheless, it is still possible that some information may be inaccurate. As part of the process of creating the data set for this product, the OncoPrescribe team reviewed most major Oncology journals and publications. We found that ALL of them contained some factual errors, inaccuracies and/or inconsistencies. That is to be expected given the volume of information available in the field of Hematology and Oncology and the rapid rate of change of prevailing knowledge in this field.

Therefore, by using OncoPrescribe, you acknowledge that in rare cases there may be an error in the data and/or that some information may be out of date. If you notice any data that is not consistent with your expectations, please contact us immediately at support@oncoprescribe.com, and we will research your question.
